

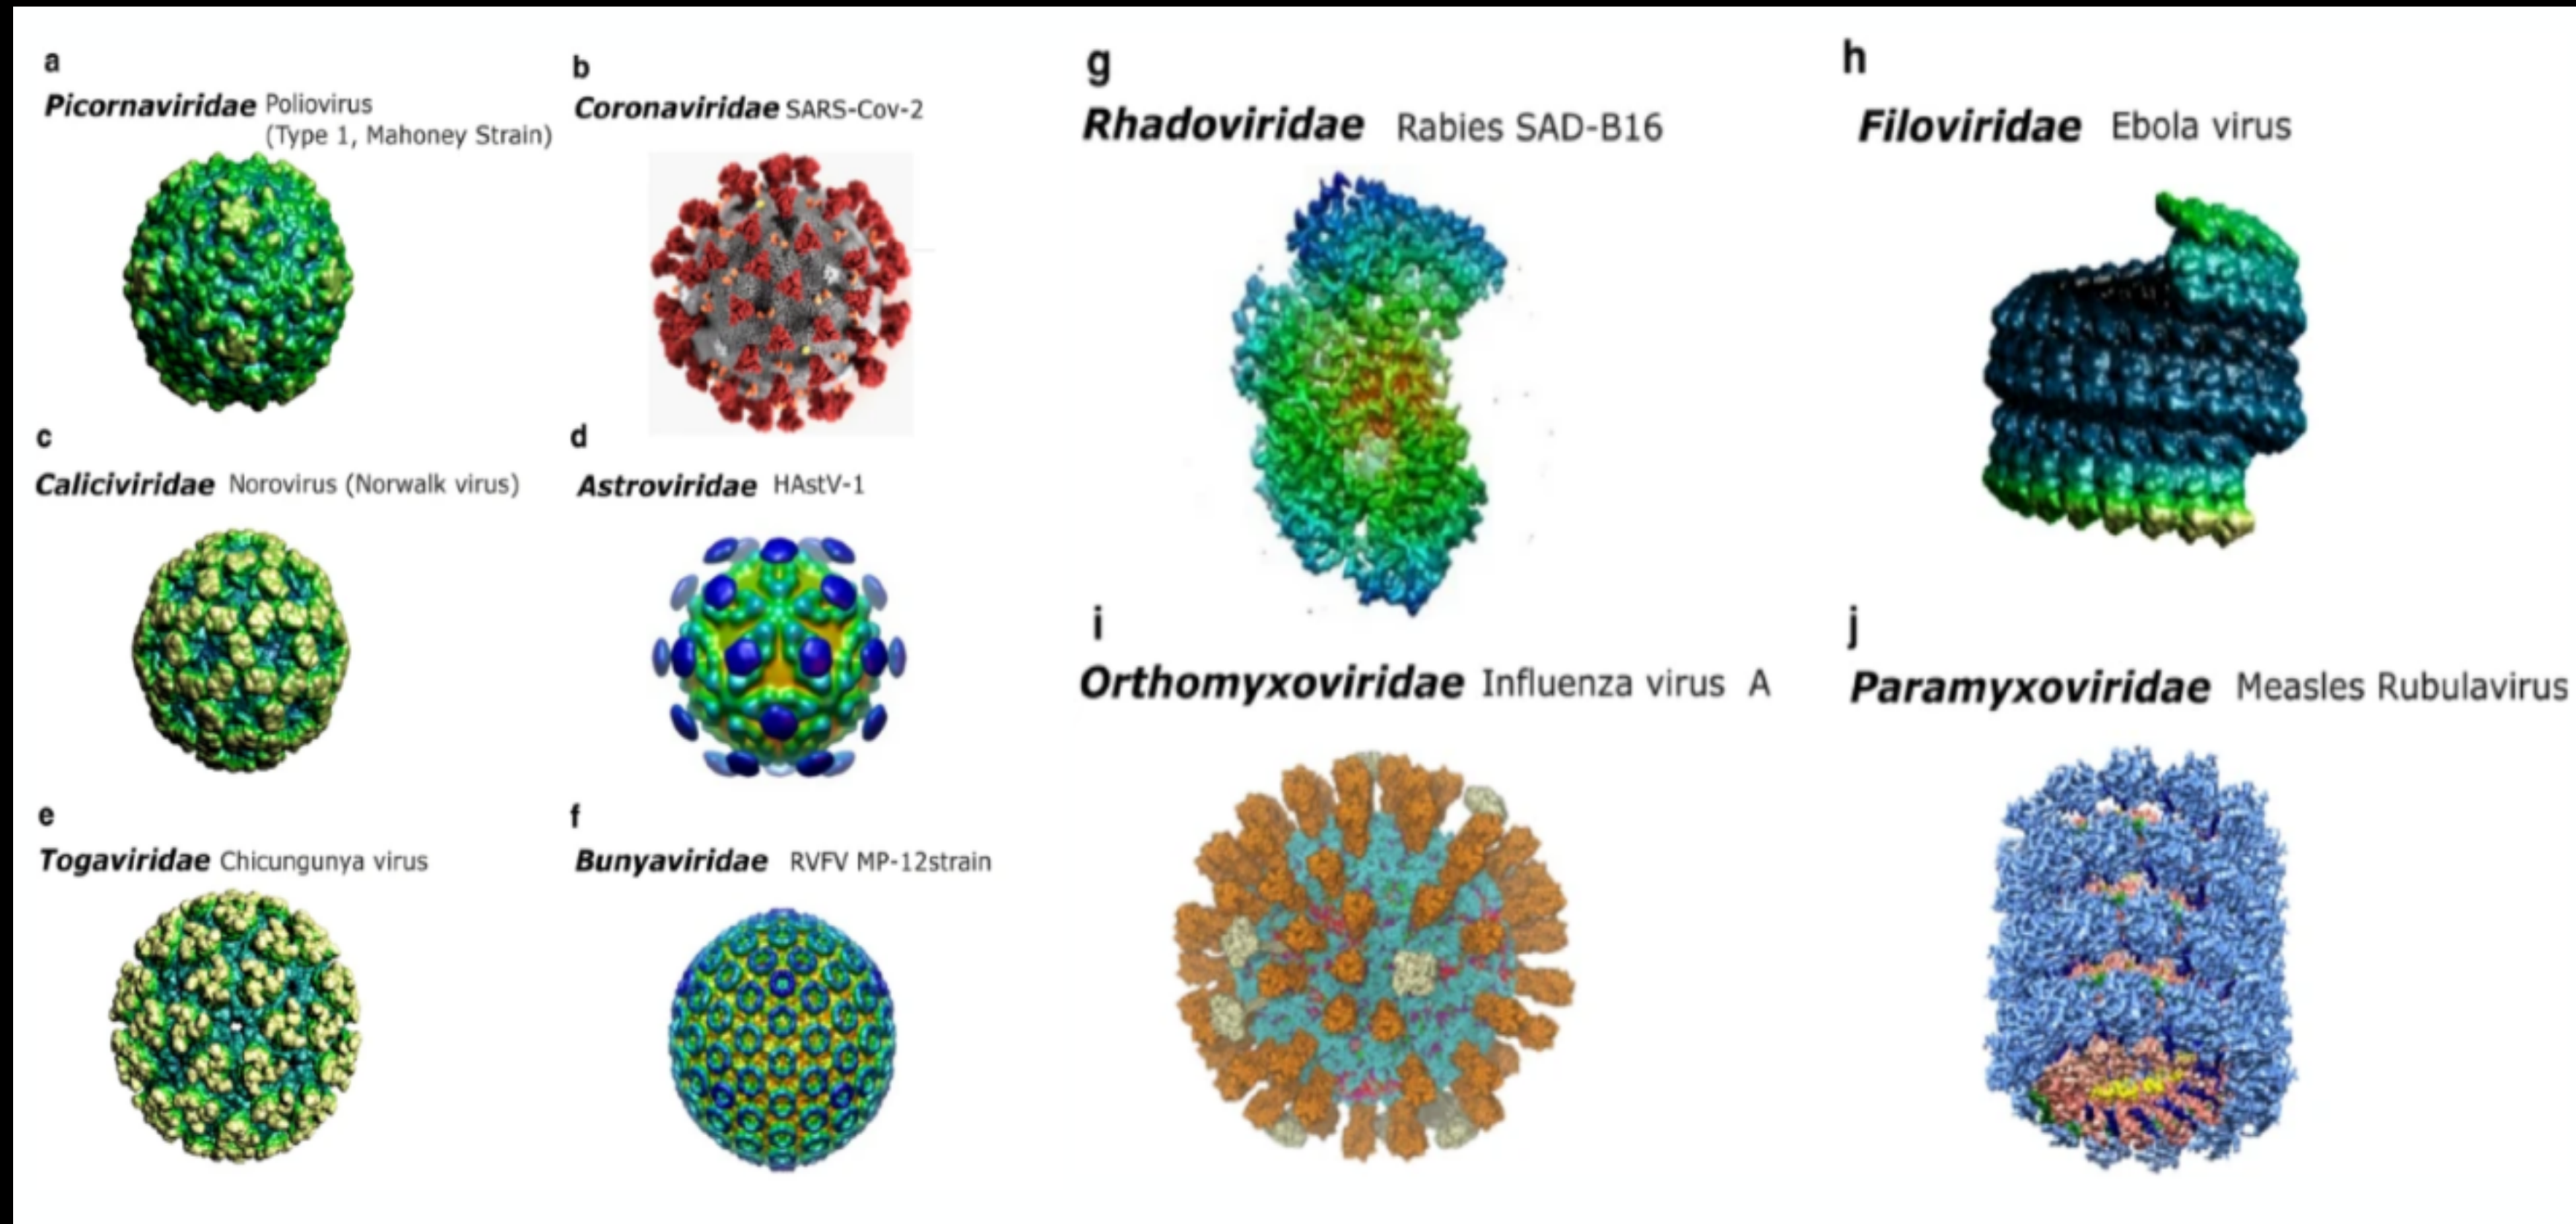

Mapping the Urban RNA Virosphere

RNA viruses matter in cities because they evolve quickly where people, animals, and environments constantly mix, creating early signals of emerging health threats

The Urban & Peri-urban RNA Virus Atlas (UPVAtlas)

UPVAtlas maps 54,945 RNA viruses from 2,922 samples (collected 1H 2020) across 102 cities, revealing urban RNA viral diversity was previously unknown.

